FEATURES

6 ONE MAGIC CHRISTMAS

A young girl persuades an angel named Gideon to restore her mother's faith in the spirit of Christmas. This contemporary fable follows in the tradition of classic holiday films.

9 COMING ATTRACTIONS

We'd like to offer you a special sneak preview of The Disney Channel's great lineup of films, specials, mini-series and prime-time series that are guaranteed to light up your winter months.

10 THE JOURNEY OF NATTY GANN

The film's screenwriter Jeanne Rosenberg tells about how she wrote Natty Gann: "I wanted a girl out there alone, making it on her own. And I wanted the girl to have a wild animal as a friend."

12 THE THREE CABALLEROS

Walt Disney's first full-length film mixing live action and animation was a striking artistic and commercial triumph. The film's jazzy Latin style has its roots in a good-will tour Walt took to South America.

PLUTO'S PEN PALS MEET

Two of Pluto's Pen Pals met this summer at the San Diego Zoo. Laura Willsey and her family from Wethersfield, CT, met Emily Posedel and her family from El Cajon, CA. The Willsey family was on their way to visit Disneyland when they stopped in San Diego for the two pen pals to meet. The girls, both nine years old, have been sharing letters for over a year.

YOUNG DISNEY CHANNEL FANS

I am writing to tell you how pleased I am to have The Disney Channel in my home. I have a seven-year-old daughter and a two-year-old son. My son didn't care too much to watch the programs on regular TV. I was surprised to see him interested in The Disney Channel. Besides Dumbo's Circus and Welcome to Pooh

Corner, his favorite program is You and Me, Kid. I think it is a wonderful program, especially for my two year old, and Mom gets a little peace and quiet. Keep up the good work.

WAS PINOCCHIO EDITED?

Our family watched the premiere of Pinocchio last night. My disappointment with you is extensive. You have edited the movie to the point where the moral of Pinocchio's story is completely lost. What a dismal letdown, especially for those of us who have seen the movie as children and remember the magic. We wish you would please give us the benefit of viewing an entire film uncut.

Mrs. Linda Bell
Lake City, PA

Pinocchio was aired complete and uncut. It has always been 88 minutes.

THE THREE CABALLEROS

Is there a chance we will be seeing the film The Three Caballeros anytime soon on The Disney Channel? I always wanted to see it, but never had the opportunity.

Fine porcelain spice jars from Gloria Vanderbilt ...delectably collectible.

Each with its own distinctive garden design, hand-decorated in 24 karat gold, and all nestled in their own country French rack.

Delicious surroundings are every bit as important as delicious food. That's why Gloria Vanderbilt designed her charming collection of spice jars ... because your kitchen should be just as beautiful—just as distinctly you—as the rest of your house.

So she created creamy white porcelain jars in an intriguing apothecary shape. And topped them with snug-fitting caps to keep herbs and spices at their piquant best.

Then she decorated each little jar with an original drawing of the leaves and flowers of the herb or spice it will contain—twenty-four in all. Delicate designs colored in palest pastels. Tender white trumpets of basil blossoms ... slender wisps of rosemary ... yellow florets of mustard.

They rival the beautiful spice cannisters sometimes found in the most expensive antique shops. Because they're crafted with the lavish quality seldom found today ... in fine imported porcelain.

The price is attractive, too. Just $12.50 each. You can acquire the collection on a convenient monthly plan and be billed for each jar as it is sent to you every month. What a sweet way to build a spice jar collection! (And, of course, you can complete the set earlier, if you like).

The set comes with a charming country French rack at no extra charge. And with each jar, you'll receive a surprise gift—a recipe card containing one of Gloria Vanderbilt's favorite recipes using that particular spice.

The Gloria Vanderbilt Spice Jar Collection isn't available in even the finest department stores and boutiques. It's yours exclusively from The Franklin Mint.

To begin your collection now, simply fill out the order form and return it to The Franklin Mint, Franklin Center, PA 19091 by January 31, 1987.

Disney BEAT

Two of this country's finest actresses add drama and passion to The Blue and The Gray, the exciting mini-series which continues on Tuesday nights on The Disney Channel: Geraldine Page, this year's Academy Award winner for Best Actress for her role in the movie The Trip to Bountiful, and Colleen Dewhurst.

Both actresses will play leading roles on New York stages this winter. In January, Colleen Dewhurst opens a new one-woman show: My Gene, the story of Carlotta Monterey, playwright Eugene O'Neill's third wife. (Dewhurst will be seen in coming months on The Disney Channel in the critically - acclaimed mini-series Anne of Green Gables.) And in March, Geraldine Page will open in Noel Coward's Blithe Spirit.

By the way, Geraldine Page's husband, Rip Torn, also stars in The Blue and The Gray, along with Stacy Keach, Lloyd Bridges, and Gregory Peck as Abraham Lincoln.

Loretta Young, who stars in the holiday classic The Bishop's Wife on The Disney Channel, has recently returned to acting after a 23-year absence. She will star in NBC's Christmas Eve, with Arthur Hill (who also appears on The Channel in One Magic Christmas) and Trevor Howard. On the subject of her retirement, Young says:

"I realized that there was more to life than what I was experiencing on a sound stage." She'd worked hard in the business for quite a while, after all, starting out in 1921 as a three-dollar-a-day extra in Rudolph Valentino's The Sheik. But when NBC sent her the Christmas Eve script, she accepted within 24 hours.

Cloris Leachman (in the Disney comedy The North Avenue Irregulars) has also recently returned to television as a chaperone for the four young women in NBC's long-running series Facts of Life.

Colleen Dewhurst appears in The Blue and The Gray.

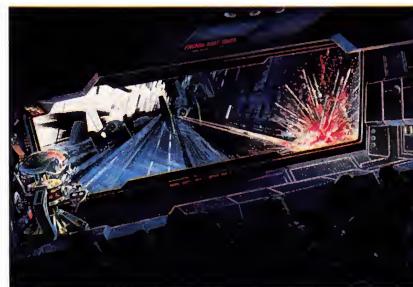

Cloris Leachman is one of The North Avenue Irregulars; Robert Duvall is in Tender Mercies; and Geraldine Page is in The Blue and The Gray.

Rex Harrison and Audrey Hepburn star in My Fair Lady, winner of eight Oscars.

"Star Tours" at Disneyland will soon offer trips to the land of the Ewoks.

She says: "I thought, it's time to get back and say, 'Cloris is here.'"

Tender Mercies won Academy Awards for star Robert Duvall (Best Actor) and screenwriter Horton Foote. Foote and Duvall were also co-producers. Duvall is currently appearing in the movie The Lightship. "It's the first work since Tender Mercies I'm really proud of," Duvall says.

Another Academy Award-winning film, My Fair Lady (which won four Oscars) brings Audrey Hepburn and Rex Harrison to The Disney Channel. Rex Harrison, who played Professor Higgins over a thousand times in Broadway and London productions, won an Oscar for the screen version. In his autobiography Rex, Harrison admits to a singing range of about one and a half notes, but Lerner and Loewe helped him create the distinctive sing-speech pattern that immortalized Harrison's Professor Higgins.

Audrey Hepburn has recently completed a thriller for ABC Movies: Love Among Thieves, with Robert Wagner, to air sometime this winter. "I don't want to do anything tragic or dramatic," says the elegant actress, "there's enough of that around. This is totally fun."

Disney's four-legged star Jed, the beautiful animal (half malamute/half wolf) who stars in The Journey of Natty Gann, will be featured in Champions of the Heart, a Disney Sunday Movie about the Iditarod, the annual Alaskan dog-sled race. Jed's trainer, Clint Rowe, is also Mike the Dog's trainer. Mike has appeared in Down and Out in Beverly Hills, on Danger Bay, and most recently in Spot Marks the X on The Disney Channel.

From Disneyland comes news of a Tomorrowland attraction scheduled to open early in 1987. "Star Tours," created by George Lucas and The Walt Disney Company, offers daily departures to the Moon of Endor.

ONE MAGIC CHRISTMAS

A Classic Film in the Holiday Tradition

Gan the spirit of Christmas have any meaning for a young woman whose family faces financial ruin? The answer is a resounding yes, as subscribers of The Disney Channel will discover on December 13 at 7:00 p.m. with the world television premiere of the contemporary film-fable, One Magic Christmas. It's a heart-warming film, made in the classic holiday tradition of Frank Capra's movie It's A Wonderful Life and Dickens' immortal tale A Christmas Carol. Like both of those earlier works, One Magic Christmas explores the true meaning of the season.

Academy Award-winning actress Mary Steenburgen heads the film's cast. She portrays Ginny Grainger, a young woman whose faith in both Christmas and the American Dream have been shattered. As the film opens, her small town of Medford has been hard hit by a depression, and her husband Jack (Gary Basaraba) has been unemployed for months. Even worse is the news that her husband's company is selling the Grainger's house out from under them.

"Ginny is very much a woman of the '80s," observes Mary Steenburgen of her character. "She's a working woman, with two small children, and she's trying to hold everything together. She's under a lot of pressure financially, and as a result, she is unable to see the things that are joyous and graceful in life."

Christmas tales are always stories of personal transformation. Scrooge was visited by Marley's ghost and changed his ways. In It's A Wonderful Life, Jimmy Stewart was the small-town banker saved from personal ruin and suicide by the kindly angel Clarence. And in One Magic Christmas, Ginny Grainger is at last brought to a profound realization of the spirit of Christmas through two remarkable forces, one human and one superhuman.

The human factor is Ginny's daughter Abbie, charmingly portrayed by seven-year-old Elizabeth Harnois. Though circumstances threaten Abbie's faith in Christmas and in Santa Claus, her meeting with a superhuman being—and her faith in him—helps restore Ginny Grainger's belief in Christmas.

Abbie's friend and Ginny's benefactor is the angel Gideon. He is a Christmas Angel charged with a special mission in the afterlife. Once a year he is given the task of helping one person to find the spirit of Christmas. Through Abbie's love, Gideon is persuaded to make Ginny that one person he aids.

One of the beautiful and unique touches to One Magic Christmas lies in its conception of this mysterious Christmas Angel and of Santa's helpers, seen when Gideon takes Abbie on a wondrous trip to Santa's workshop. All are people who have been rewarded in the afterlife with positions in Santa's workshop.

Gideon's appearance is a case in point. As Director Phillip Borsos noted, "Casting a sweet angelic character was too obvious. Dressed in a 19th century wool overcoat and his best cowboy hat, Harry Dean Stanton's appearance should provide a pleasant surprise." (Gideon was a cowboy who saved a boy's life.)

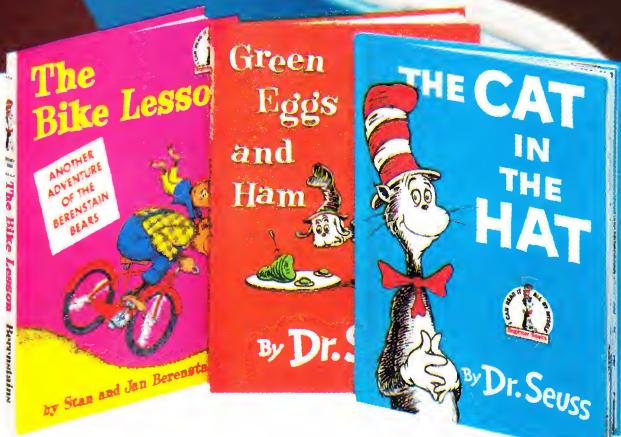

Despite his scruffy appearance, Gideon wins Abbie's affection by his kindness and magical abilities, setting the stage for a series of miraculous adventures. (Parents may wish to explain to very small children that Christmas Angels like Gideon are very, very rare, and one must use great caution in dealing with strangers.)

"The film is intentionally a latter day Christmas Carol," said Thomas Meehan, who brought the screenplay of One Magic Christmas to its final form. "Ginny is more or less a contemporary Scrooge, and certain of the adventures which happen to Ginny are equivalent to Scrooge's dream."

But perhaps director Borsos has the best perspective on One Magic Christmas: "I wanted to do a Christmas story," he said, "because I basically believe that the world is full of good people."

THERE IS ONLY ONE DR. SEUSS.

Here's how he turns a child on to reading.

When it comes to helping children discover the joy of reading, nobody does it like Dr. Seuss. His marvelous stories, appealing characters, and colorful illustrations are so full of fun, kids return to them again and again.

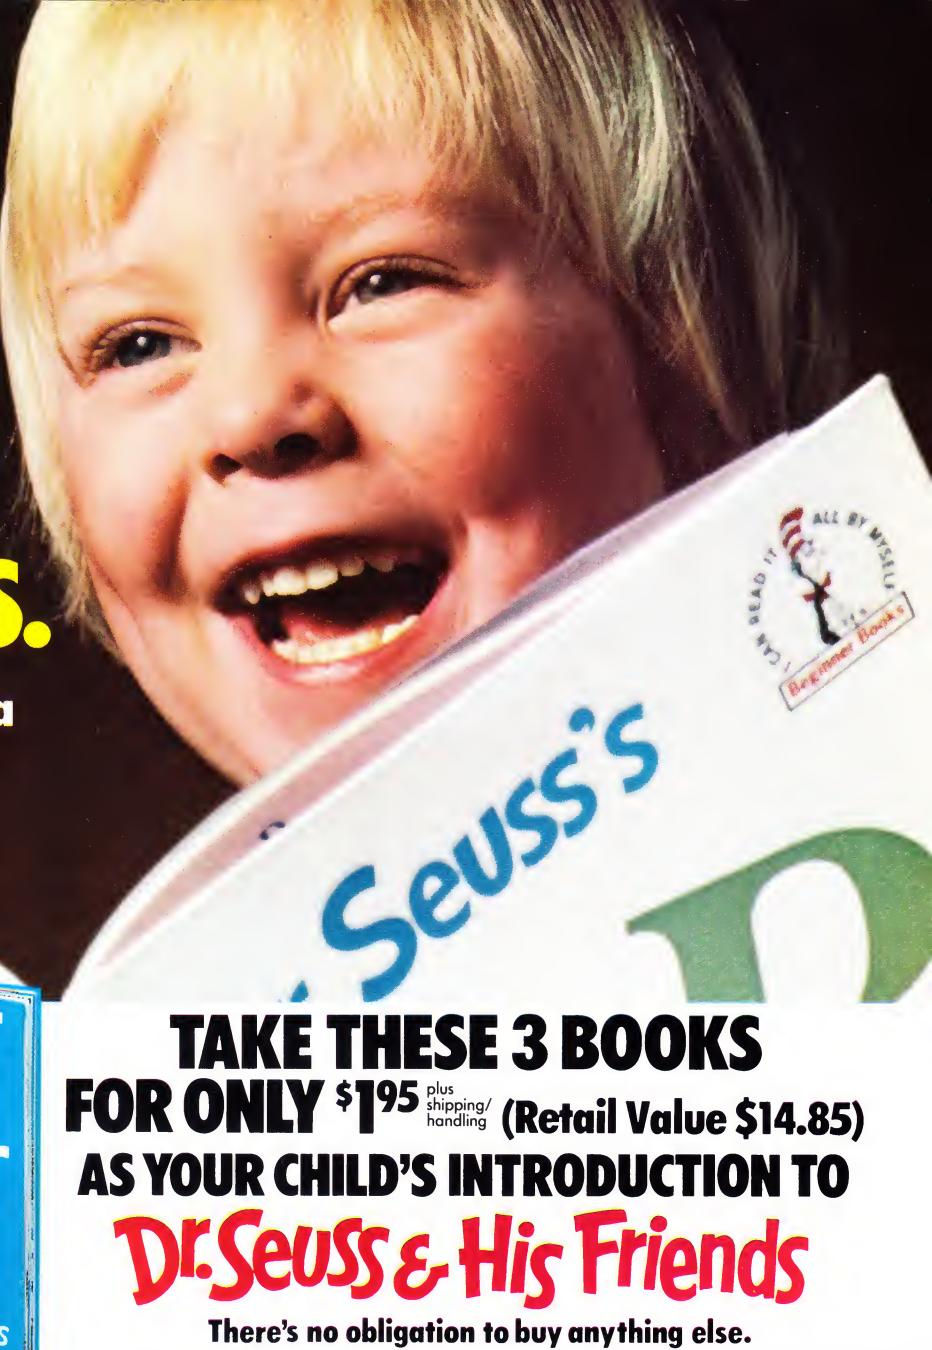

The words are just right for young readers, too. They're in large, clear type. They often tell the story in rhyme. And they're so closely related to the pictures that, with a little help from Mom or Dad, even pre-schoolers can start reading all by themselves. And the best part is that when a child is turned on to reading by Dr. Seuss and his friends, he generally stays turned on to reading for life.

A HAPPY START FROM THE ONLY BOOK CLUB WITH DR. SEUSS.

This is a wonderful time to introduce your child to Dr. Seuss and his friends, and these three books are ideal starters: "The Cat in the Hat" by Dr. Seuss, "Green Eggs and Ham" by Dr. Seuss, and "The Bike Lesson" featuring the famous Berenstain Bears. We'll send your child all three, which cost $14.85 at the regular retail price, and bill you for only $1.95 plus shipping and handling.

PLUS BIG SAVINGS, A FREE GIFT.

So send now. And along with three introductory books for less than the price of one, we'll include, free, The Cat in the Hat Bookrack, shown on this page, a $3.50 retail value. It's a gift your child will love and it's yours to keep free even if you should decide to return the three books and tear up the bill. Please read full details in the order form, then fill it out and mail it today.

COMING ATTRACTIONS!

A Special Sneak Preview of the Exciting Programs Headed Your Way on The Disney Channel

December and January mark the end of one year and the start of another. But among changing times and seasons, one thing remains constant: The Disney Channel's commitment to high-quality entertainment for the entire family. And for the months to come, The Disney Channel has selected a dazzling array of programs for your viewing pleasure. It's a mix of classic Disney live-action and animated feature films, a wide variety of movies from producers around the world, and the finest mini-series. The Disney Channel is also expanding its broadcasting day to 24 hours, making The Disney Channel accessible to every member of your family, no matter what their schedules.

One of January's highlights on The Disney Channel is Bud Greenspan's magnificent film 16 Days of Glory, a stunning visual record of the human side of the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles. 16 Days of Glory probes beneath the surface of athletic competition to focus on the moving personal dramas. In addition to this extraordinary feature, The Disney Channel will also present an additional series of 12 Olympic Profiles: 1984.

In the past year, Disney Channel Premiere Films, such as Parent Trap II, Spot Marks the X, and Down the Long Hills, offered subscribers new quality family entertainment. That tradition continues in 1987 with the U.S. television premiere of Strange Companions. Starring Douglas McClure, it's the story of a pilot and a young boy who must struggle to survive after their plane crashes in the wilderness. And The Disney Channel's producers are preparing several new films for presentation this spring.

Beginning with The Red Fury, The Channel has been proud to present Disney Channel Discoveries, films of high quality and value that are picture perfect for the entire family. Coming up in our series are three more film Discoveries. The Quest stars E.T.'s Henry Thomas. It's the story of a young American boy's adventures in Australia. A Billion for Boris, starring Tim Kazurinsky and Lee Grant, is an enchanting fable of a group of kids who repair a TV—and dis-series co-produced by The Disney Channel which is based on the series of famous children's books by L. M. Montgomery. Anne of Avonlea continues the story of Anne Shirley, the young orphan adopted by the owners of Green Gables Farm, that was begun in the Emmy Award-winning mini-series Anne of Green Gables. Anne of Avonlea is a sensitive, moving work, beautifully filmed and starring Megan Follows as Anne Shirley. And to set the stage for subscribers, The Disney Channel will also present the original Anne of Green Gables to create eight hours of superb family entertainment.

The other special event is Shirley Temple Theatre. It's an exclusive presentation of 18 films by the greatest child star of all time.

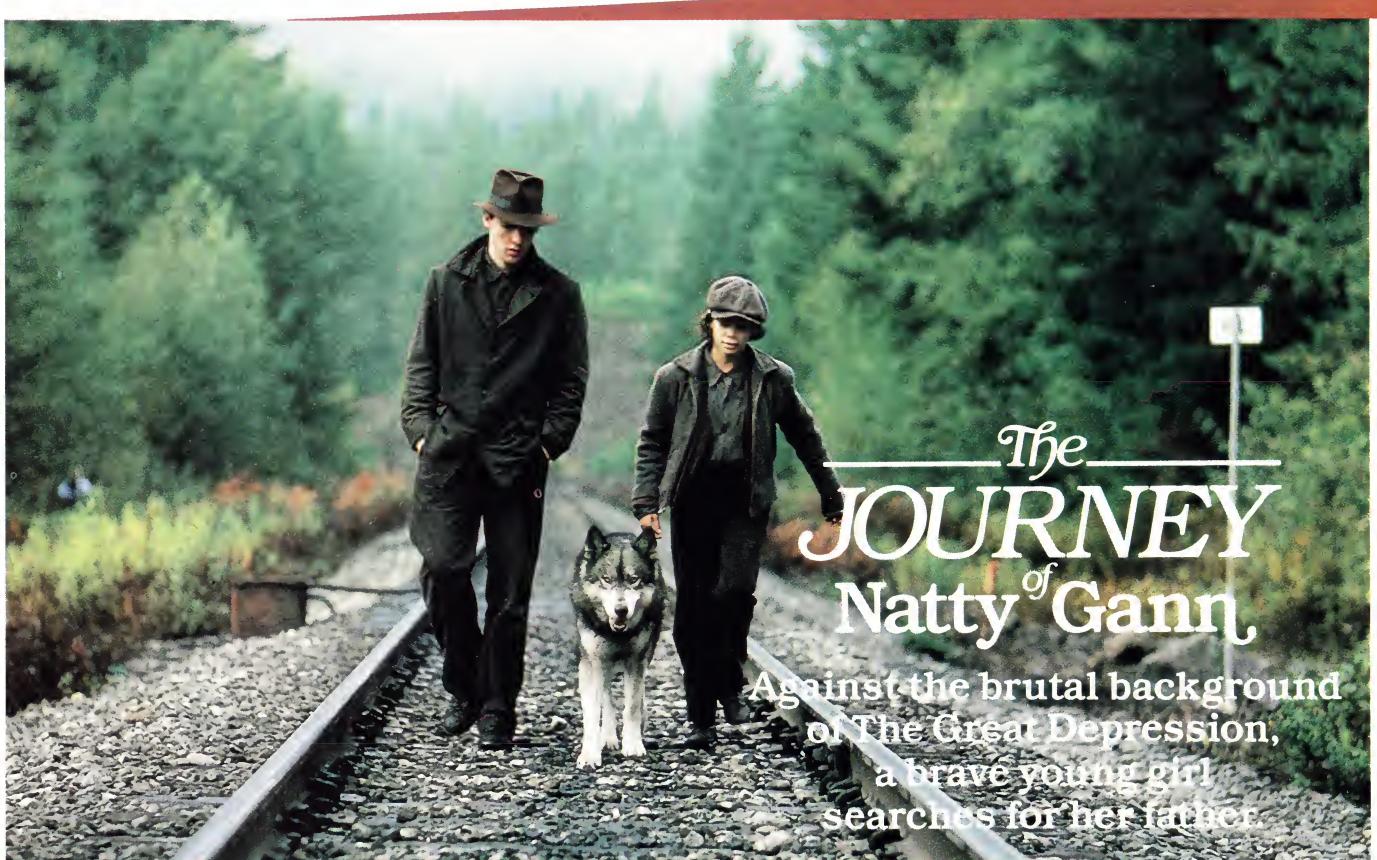

There is also an entertaining slate of animated movies and series coming up. Highlighting the schedule is the exclusive world television premiere of a Disney classic: Fun & Fancy Free. It's the only Disney feature-length animated film starring this winning combination: Jiminy Cricket, Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and Goofy.

cover that it can tell the future. Charlie Smith and the Fritter Tree is the true story of Charlie Smith. Born a slave in the 1850s, Charlie Smith witnesses the American experience from his childhood in the Old South right up to modern times, just before his death an amazing 134 years later. And of course you'll continue to see fine Disney family films like Freaky Friday.

In addition, The Disney Channel will present two special events this spring. The first is Anne of Avonlea: The Continuing Story of Anne of Green Gables, a four-hour mini-

The JOURNEY Natty Gann

Against the brutal background of The Great Depression, a brave young girl searches for her father.

Depression Chicago :
Sherman (Scatman Crothers)
warns Natty about the perils of riding the rails.

"It's an adventure I would have loved to have taken," says screenwriter Jeanne Rosenberg about Natty Gann's cross-country odyssey with a wolf. Natty's father had been forced to leave her for work in the Pacific Northwest, but Natty refused to stay in Chicago until he sent for her. (Her mother had died.) Jeanne wrote the original screenplay for The Journey of Natty Gann, so in a sense she did endure every inch of the harrowing 2000-mile trek.

And a thrilling adventure it is, much of it through beautiful wilderness, as you'll discover when The Journey of Natty Gann has its world television premiere on The Disney Channel on December 20. The Disney Channel Magazine recently talked with Jeanne about how she wrote the story and got the film produced—a journey in itself.

Jeanne lives on a horse ranch, commuting distance from Hollywood but a world apart in feeling. Her second-floor study looks out to rolling hills. After Jeanne writes what she wants for the day, she goes horseback riding. It's her therapy, she says.

The Journey of Natty Gann began on a day in 1981, when Jeanne sat in her study with a pad and pencil. All she knew was that she wanted to see a girl in a great adventure. She had co-authored the screenplay for The Black Stallion, her favorite childhood book. But it, like all other adventure stories and animal stories she'd loved as a child, was about a boy. "I wanted a girl out there alone, without adults, making it on her own.

"I had been reading about the Thirties, mainly Steinbeck. That era has always appealed to me. People had to rally then in a way that we've never had to. We live in a soft culture. Once I had placed Natty Gann in the Thirties, the story just presented itself."

The wolf was a crucial part of the story for Jeanne. "When I was a child I spent a lot of time tramping through the woods with dogs," she recalls. "I wanted that girl to have a wild animal as a friend, an animal that seemed almost mystical."

After Jeanne had completed the screenplay, she and producer Mike Lobell and director Jeremy Kagan worked together for months on the film. They were in agreement about what the film ought to be: an emotional portrayal of the bond between daughter and father and an authentic view of the hardships of the Thirties. The only difference among them was about the role of the wolf, which Jeanne saw as more important than the others did.

The road to production became rocky when they tried selling the idea to studios. They were confronted by one negative reaction after another: "It would cost too much to have it set in the Thirties." "If it were a classic book, maybe we could take it on, but it's not." "You've got to get rid of the wolf."

But Disney liked it. Production designers set to work creating Thirties' sets, and the wolf stayed in the script.

When the movie was released a year ago, it was hailed for its Thirties' authenticity and its heartfelt story. Movie critic Rex Reed wrote about director

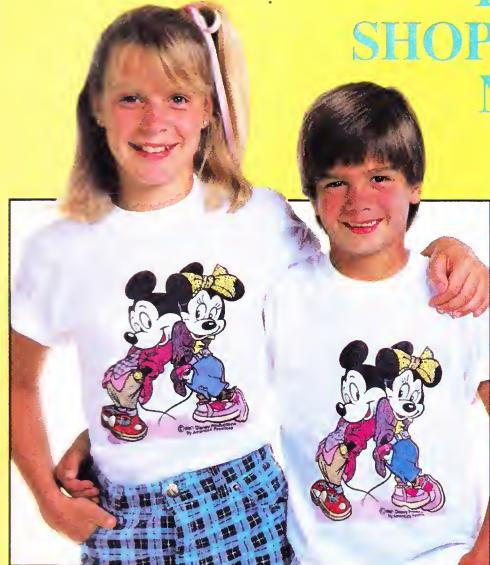

A treacherous odyssey:
Courageous Natty (Meredith Salenger) gets a hand from a drifter, Harry (John Cusack).

Jeremy Kagan: "He proves again that he can grip the emotions and sustain suspense at the same time with a sophisticated authority that appears to be

The Good Neighbor Policy Turns Out Great Entertainment

THE THREE CABALLEROS!

In 1941 Walt Disney made a good-will tour of South America, backed by the State Department. The Government was promoting a Good Neighbor Policy in the Americas, in the face of the outbreak of world war in Europe. Two films grew out of Walt's trip: Saludos Amigos, a featurette released in 1943, and The Three Caballeros, a full-length color feature finally released in 1945. The latter film was hailed as an artistic and commercial success.

A box-office hit, the film did better than Snow White when tested in 25 U.S. cities. It topped all house records in Mexico City. But the film hasn't been seen in its entirety since then. Now, on January 10 at 7:00 p.m. (EST/PST), The Disney Channel is showing The Three Caballeros as it was originally released. It was reissued once, in 1977, but in a heavily edited version.

Walt Disney accomplished what he and the Government set out to do. He captured on film the lush beauty of the South American continent, and the color and gaiety of its peoples. But The Three Caballeros gained recognition more for its dynamic animation than for its good-neighborness.

It was the first color feature film to combine live action and animation, and critics marveled at Walt's achievement. The technique was further developed in Song of the South and reached its height with Mary Poppins, but The Three Caballeros still stands as a landmark picture. In addition, the film's use of surreal visual effects was considered as innovative as the advanced recording techniques ("Fantasound") of Fantasia (1940).

When the film opens, it's Donald's birthday, and each of his three large, beautifully wrapped birthday presents holds a different South American travel adventure. The first gift is a movie projector, with film winding Donald south of the border to the Galapagos Islands, where he encounters

another rare bird
Pablo and a flying donkey.

The second present is a large pop-up book, out of which bursts Joe Carioca, the Brazilian parrot about town. He and Donald take off on a Magic Serape (carpet to us) for a high-flying tour of Brazil. Donald is an enthusiastic visitor. He appreciates South America's beauty—especially its señoritas—and is carried away by calypso rhythms.

The last present is a sound track of Latin music, which transports our traveler to Mexico. The music becomes wild, finally explodes, and Panchito, the Mexican rooster, jumps on the Serape with Joe Carioca and Donald for travels through Mexico.

One of the highlights of the Mexican trip for the caballeros is the Christmas festival of Las Posadas. Reenacting the journey of Mary and Joseph seeking shelter, Mexican children walk through the streets carrying candles, until they're taken in by friendly neighbors. There, adults and children celebrate together. The high point of the festivities is breaking open the piñata filled with gifts.

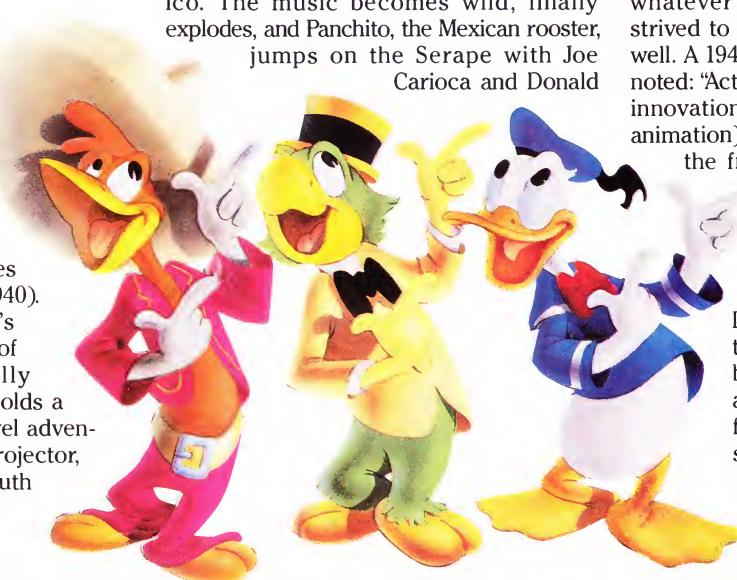

The venturesome caballeros take off again on their Magic Serape, this time bound for the glamorous nightlife of Mexico City. They then fly to Vera Cruz, and finally end up on the beach at Acapulco.

Surrounded by bathing beauties, Donald's in heaven.

The Three Caballeros was delayed in being released because of the war. Not only was there a shortage of film and a waiting list to get it, but most of the Disney Studio production during the war years was for the armed forces and other government agencies. At one point war-related work was 95 percent of the studio's output. (There were no Mickey Mouse cartoons for three years.) There was also a shortage of animators, many of them having been drafted.

But Walt Disney was ingenious at using whatever talent was available, and he strived to be innovative with each film as well. A 1944 newspaper article about Walt, noted: "Actually the war forced him into the innovation (of combining live action and animation). Many of his best artists are at the front. By pulling human beings into cartoons fewer artists are needed."

No matter the motivation, when the film opened in theaters, most critics agreed that Disney had accomplished something everyone thought impossible. He had put together animated film and live-action film with such accuracy that on screen, Donald Duck was actually dancing with Aurora Miranda—and loving every minute of it.

Friends

A friend is someone special
Who's always by your side,
And when you look into his eyes
You know he hasn't lied.

He never laughs behind your back,
Or even to your face.
And then you know how real friends are,
They love you in any case.

The Magic of Walt Disney

Who created a mouse from a pencil and a pad?

Who drew a wisecracking duck to make us all glad?

Who made a dog to fill us with glee?

It's from the magic of Walt Disney.

Who brought to life stories colorful and bright?

Who worked so hard day and night?

Who made an amusement park for you and for me?

It's from the magic of Walt Disney.

Who made us all movies to see?

Who made them forever always to be?

Fifty-one awards, he has the key!
It's from the magic of Walt Disney.

The Magic of READING

Books open up new worlds for all of us. There's adventure and drama found in novels and stories. You can discover how and why things work, from engines to airplanes to the very stars themselves. Books can take you to the past or to the future, into outer space or into the depths of the sea. It only requires one act of magic: reading.

That's why we're going to be devoting a page of "Just for Kids" to the magic of reading. It will be a page featuring excerpts from the latest and best books, interviews with the authors of those books, and most important of all, book reviews. And who gets to review those books? You do. The Disney Channel would love to read reviews of your favorite books—and we want to publish as many of them as we can (address is on page 17). This month, to get things rolling, we have two Disney Channel stars who will tell you about their favorite books.

Oh yes—on page 22 of "Just for Kids" you'll also find "The Poet's Corner". That's where you can practice another form of magic—the magic of writing.

Gingerbread Men, Women—and Mickey Mouse!

Recipe makes about 20 Mickey faces or 15 People Play it safe: ask your parents to help you bake.

INGREDIENTS FOR COOKIES:

1/4 cup butter, at room temperature
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup molasses
2 1/2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg

ICING:

1/2 cup confectioners sugar lemon juice
food coloring

To make the cookies:

With a fork, mix the brown sugar into the butter. When the lumps are gone, and it is a smooth, tan mixture, add the molasses. Stir until thoroughly mixed.

Measure each of the dry ingredients (flour, baking powder, ginger and salt) into a sieve over a mixing bowl. Sift them together into the bowl.

In a small bowl, beat an egg with a fork until the white and the yellow are mixed.

Take turns adding the flour and the egg to the butter mixture. You can add them in pretty large quantities, mixing thoroughly after each addition. When it gets too thick to stir with a fork, you'll have to mix it with your hands (Be sure to wash your hands first!)

Shape the mixture into a ball, and put it on a surface that has been sprinkled with flour, to prevent sticking. (Put some flour on the rolling pin, too.)

If it is still too sticky, add flour, a little at a time, and knead the batter until it is stretchy and can be rolled out easily. If it's too crumbly and will not form a ball, add water, just a few drops at a time, until you can roll it out.

Roll it at least $\frac{1}{4}$ inch thick, and cut out your shapes. Put them on a cookie sheet that you have lightly greased with butter or oil. Then bake in a preheated oven at 325 degrees. Cookies $\frac{1}{4}$ inch thick will take 8 to 10 minutes. Thicker cookies take longer.

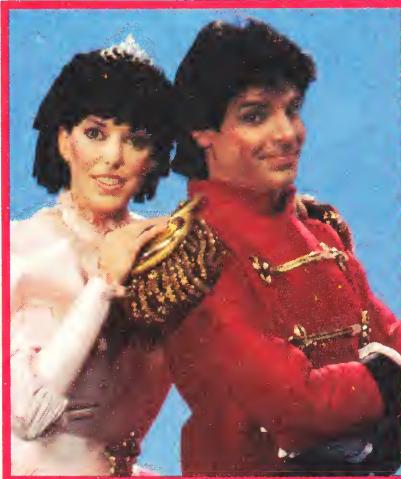

For bright-colored icing, put the confectioners sugar in a bowl and add lemon juice, just a few drops at a time. (The icing should be thick so that it will not dribble off the cookie when you decorate it.) Divide the icing into four cups, and add a drop or two of food coloring to each cup.

To use Mickey and the gingerbread people as cookie cutters, paste them to cardboard and cut out the shapes. Later, when your dough is rolled out, place a figure on the gingerbread dough and cut around it with a small knife. Then, using a spatula, slide it onto a cookie sheet.

SNOOPY, COME HOME

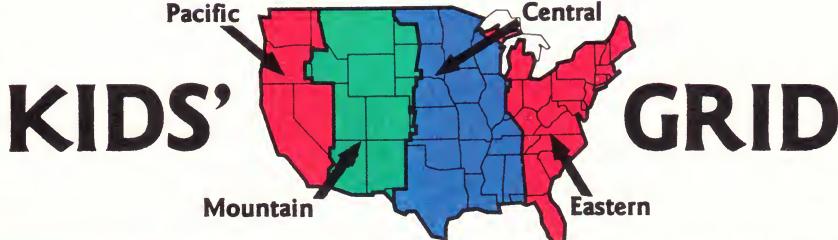

A lonely little girl writes to Snoopy, and the pooch responds by coming to visit, bringing along Woodstock the bird. She wants them to stay and live with her, but Snoopy wants to go back to Charlie Brown and the Peanuts gang. Tune in December 20 at 7:00 p.m. (EST/PST).

THE STEADFAST TIN SOLDIER

The Enchanted Musical Playhouse is back December 21 at 5:30 p.m. (EST/PST), with a musical version of the fairy tale about a brave toy soldier and his tragic love for the ballerina doll. Bright-colored costumes and wonderful music make this holiday special a treasure.

THE CAT IN THE HAT

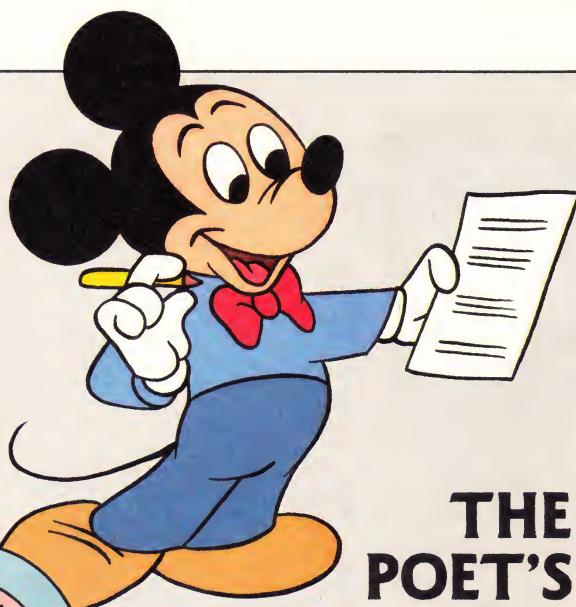

Two children sit at the window. It's raining, and they're bored. But not for long. The cat with the very tall hat turns their house upside down, and a quiet day turns into a wild adventure, in this Dr. Seuss musical special, premiering December 30 at 6:00 p.m. (EST/PST).

THE POET'S CORNER

There's another side to the magic of reading: the magic of writing. One of the most fun—and challenging—types of writing is poetry. Not only does poetry give you a way of expressing your feelings and looking at the world around you, it also sharpens your writing skills. Poetry demands that you choose every word for its maximum effect—the goal of all good writing.

How do you go about writing poetry? There are all sorts of techniques and forms to use. In "The Poet's Corner" we will explore a number of techniques and forms, from haiku to quatrains, from metaphor to simile. Then you can try your hand at each of these, composing your very own poems. And of course, we'll be pleased to publish many of your examples in our "Letters, Drawings, and Poems" section of "Just For Kids".

Now let's look at one of the shortest—and most beautiful—of poems, the Japanese haiku. A haiku is a three-line poem. It doesn't have to rhyme. But there is a form to follow: the words of the first and last lines must contain only five syllables in all. The second line is seven syllables long. The haiku also refers to a season, using an image from nature to go with the poet's feelings. The greatest writer of haiku was the Japanese poet Basho, who lived 300 years ago. Below are two examples of famous haiku plus one written for The Disney Channel Magazine. Take a good look at them, and then try writing your own.

Black rain clouds, a crow sits silent on a bare branch:
autumn has ended.
—Basho

It is planting time:
People bend and rise in the field like green rice shoots.
—Buson

Spring cleaning and dust flies. The cat naps in a beam of gentle sunlight.

FUN FACTS ABOUT SOFTWARE

In our last issue, Mickey helped us look at computer hardware. But a terminal, and computer memory and a printer can't do a thing by themselves. They need instructions—and someone to give them.

That's where computer software comes into the picture. Software is a computer program, a set of instructions that tells the computer just what to do. But how does that work?

Programs are written in computer "languages." These languages have names like Basic and Cobol and Fortran. It helps to know just what language your computer understands when you talk to it. (Imagine trying to talk to a French person in English or Japanese!)

Of course, there are lots of programs that are already written in computer languages. (We've looked at a number of software packages in the last two issues.) This kind of software is called "pre-packaged software." This can be in the form of a cassette or a cartridge or, as in many home computers, a "floppy disk" or "diskette," which stores information and programs.

The diskette is loaded into a "disk drive." This "reads" the information on the diskette and transfers it to the computer's memory. Then the computer's microprocessor (remember that diagram of a microprocessor in last issue) processes the information. After that, every time you touch the keyboard, the computer responds to your command. If your command doesn't make sense, the computer tells you so.

Now, pre-packaged software comes in two types. The first type, which is used for a lot of games, has all the work done for you. In the second, you have a "framework" (like an account ledger to keep track of your allowance)—and you get to fill it in with your own information, which you can store.

Of course, once you're computer fluent, you can do your own programming. That's a four-step process. First, pick a task for your machine. Then break the task down step-by-step. Next, diagram your commands into a flow chart. Use the keyboard to enter your commands into the computer, using the right computer language. Then run your program, and presto!

Those are some fun facts about software. Now that you know the basics about computers, you're ready to go out and become computer fluent. To celebrate, here's some pre-packaged software for you.

KERMIT'S ELECTRONIC STORYMAKER

This program is perfect for family members in the first through third grades. You make up a story starring Kermit and his Muppet friends. Then you can read the story while Kermit acts it out on screen.

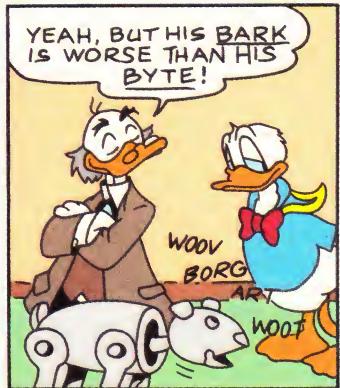

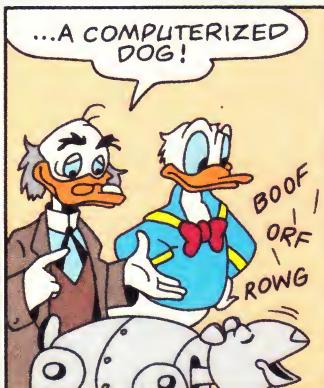

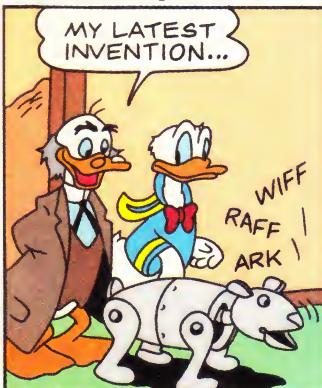

GOOFY'S WORD FACTORY

If you think Kermit's Electronic Storymaker is fun, but a little too young for you, try this software for grades three through seven. It'll teach you really keen words, and if you use them in a story, the story comes to life with Disney characters acting it out.

COSMIC CARNIVAL

What makes an enterprise like Disneyland go? Find out when you're placed in command of a computer-simulated amusement park—and you have to call all the shots. This one is for grades 7 through 12, but Mom and Dad may want to check it out, too!

Walt Disney's DONALD DUCK®

Oh, it can't be! That evil (SESAMGORT) [REDACTED] has captured (P'NAC HURNCC) [REDACTED] [REDACTED]! Now, shut behind a (OROD) [REDACTED], locked with a (EKY) [REDACTED], our hero is trapped somewhere in (DOSNALG) [REDACTED]!

Can you help free the Cap'n? Boxes of Cap'n Crunch Cereal have exciting games, clues, and secret phone numbers to tell you how! If you do free him, you could win a share of $1,000,000! But hurry! Or Cap'n Crunch and his (NURCCH WROPE) [REDACTED] [REDACTED] may be finished!

No purchase necessary. For full rules and free Rescue Kit write to: "Free The Cap'n" Rescue Kit, P.O. Box 3079, Syosset, NY 11775. Sweepstakes expires Feb. 14, 1987.

THE THREE CABALLEROS

This Disney classic, shown in its entirety for the first time since its theatrical premiere in 1945, remains a landmark in film history. The Three Caballeros was the first full-length color feature to layer animation with live-action, a technique that reached its height in Mary Poppins.

The film opens with Donald Duck receiving three birthday presents. Each gift takes him on a magical set of adventures in South America, where he meets two pals, Joe Carioca, the Brazilian parrot, and Pancho, the Mexican rooster. This exclusive premiere also features famous Latin performers of that era. Jan. 10, 13, 16

THUNDER IN THE VALLEY

Based on the famed book Bob, Son of Battle, this story of Scottish sheepherders focuses on an embittered man whose love for his prize-winning sheep dog is greater than his love for his son. The two are brought into bitter conflict when the boy raises a champion dog of his own. Jan. 5, 9, 13

FIVE MILE CREEK

In Australia's "Old West," Kate Wallace and the American widow Maggie Scott run the stage stop at Five Mile Creek, halfway between the coast and the Wilga goldfields. Their friends Con and Jack own the Australian Express stage line. A new Five Mile Creek episode airs every Friday at 8:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time).

THE RACCOONS

What's the latest news echoing throughout the Emerald Forest? Did someone say something about there being a "Gold Rush"? How will that affect the lives of Bert and Melissa and Ralph? And how is Cyril Sneer involved?

Dec. 27, 30; Jan. 2, 6, 11

THIS WEEK

THE STEADFAST TIN SOLDIER

The celebrated mime team of Shields and Yarnell star in an adaptation of Hans Christian Andersen's story. A tin soldier has only one leg, on which he stands handily. Then the soldier espies a beautiful ballerina doll, who delicately perches on one leg. He falls in love with the graceful dancer, but their passion is thwarted by the steadfast soldier's mortal enemy, a vicious jack-in-the-box.

TENDER MERCIES

Robert Duvall won an Academy Award for his performance as the down-and-out country and western crooner Mac Sledge, who discovers redemption when he meets a young widow and her son.

Tender Mercies has been selected for our mature viewers. It will air only after 9:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time). Parental discretion is advised.

COMING ATTRACTIONS!

The Disney Channel is always searching for other outstanding works of children's entertainment, such as the presentations of Dr. Seuss's immortal stories or the tales of the Peanuts gang. One such outstanding feature coming your way is Heathcliff, starring that adorable, if at times downright pesky, feline. And making a return to The Disney Channel is that world renowned cartoon figure, Asterix the Gaul.

Exclusive specials have always had a high priority at The Disney Channel. This past year, we've presented such stellar shows as Raffi and The New Vaudevillians. Coming up on The Disney Channel is another fun-filled musical special. The stars this time are the young pop group The Jets. They're eight brothers and sisters whose hit tunes "Crush on You," "Private Number," and "Curiosity" have led critics to hail them as a new musical dynasty in the tradition of The Jacksons. (The Jets' family moved to the United States from the Polynesian island of Tonga.) As drummer LeRoy Wolfgramm, the oldest of The Jets explains, "Dad always wanted us kids to stay together as a unit."

One of the hallmarks of The Disney Channel's programming has been its lineup of quality prime-time series, every weekday night. Two new series have a winter premiere on The Disney Channel.

Boone is the heart-warming story of Boone Sawyer, who lives in rural Tennessee during the 1950s. He's a young man with a guitar and a unique musical vision that will one day be known as rock 'n' roll. The other series debuting on The Disney Channel is a television classic. Set in Montana at the turn of the century, My Friend Flicka chronicles the adventures of young Ken McLaughlin and his horse Flicka.

Of course, that commitment to high-quality series also applies to KidScene, the special one-hour block of entertainment for kids that airs every weekday. It features the best in kids' drama, DTV, and of course, Kids Incorporated. The five dazzling performers and their band appear every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. It's all part of KidScene.

The Disney Channel remains committed to television entertainment for the total family. It's part of The Disney Channel philosophy that television can bring families together, and that family viewing can be quality time spent together. Now, with an exciting new lineup of entertainment for the new year—and the introduction of 24-hour programming—the magic of The Disney Channel continues for one and all.

effortless.... The Journey of Natty Gann knows where it's going."

Everyone working on the film had known where the film was going, according to Jeanne. There was a striving for authenticity at every level, from a momentary glimpse of a torn poster of F.D.R. in a Chicago Depression scene, to the slow development of a bond between Natty and the wolf.

The relationship between Meredith Salenger, who plays Natty, and Jed, who is actually half wolf/half malamute, came naturally for both of them. "Wolves are intuitive," Jeanne explains, "and they like some people and don't like others. Jed has the mind of a wolf, and he liked Meredith immediately and stuck by her throughout the film."

Meredith says of their relationship: "We got closer and closer, and by the end of filming, Jed was protecting me. If the director suddenly gestured aggressively, Jed would move in close to me. Jed's so intelligent. He's smarter than Lassie. And when you look into the wolf's eyes, he looks human. You know what he's thinking."

The film captures the desperation of Chicago during the Depression: hungry people standing in breadlines; men out of work, huddled in despondent groups around street lights, many of them with no place to live; dirty hobo camps rife with violence. In preparation for the film, production designer Paul Sylbert pored over his vast picture and book collection. The result is a film presenting one of the most richly detailed depictions of that period ever put on the screen.

Costume designer Albert Wolsky, too, did careful research on period clothes. He worked on the color and aging of garments, and created nearly 2000 costumes.

Under Kagan's direction, the role of the father became more important to the movie than it had been on paper. Sol Gann is a good and caring father. He tried to do the best he could by Natty in going to get work. But that meant leaving her. Jeanne agreed with Kagan's desire to capture the power of a father-daughter relationship, but she never lost sight of the importance of the wolf. After all, he'd protected Natty throughout.

When cameramen were shooting the final scene of the movie, the wolf was to be left out. But Jeanne pleaded with Kagan to include a shot of him. At the end of the film, we see Jed alone, howling up on a mountain ledge. "The wolf would have continued to take care of Natty, had she needed him," Jeanne argued confidently.

Reading FOR THE LOVE OF IT

As part of The Disney Channel's effort to encourage children to read, we're allocating space in this and the next couple of issues of The Disney Channel Magazine to exploring the joys and value of reading. Here, education experts and lovers of books share their findings and thoughts about reading. We've added new reading and writing activities to the "Just for Kids" section. And in the next issue we'll also introduce The Disney Channel "Read, Write and Draw" activity for children, with the chance that their stories and illustrations could be shown on The Disney Channel or be published in The Disney Channel Magazine.

Reading takes us into a world with an endless horizon. It offers more variety than anyone can experience in his own day-to-day life. Young Harriet, in Louise Fitzhugh's Harriet the Spy, expresses the pure joy of reading when she muses: "How I love to read. The whole world gets bigger."

Helping Your Children Become Better Readers

William J. Bennett

Encouraging early reading is high on the priority list of Education Secretary William J. Bennett. He's also eagerly promoting a redefinition of literacy to mean not just simply being able to decode words and sentences but being able to read a book and understand its meaning—reading for content. Here are some of the findings from the Education Department's recent report "What Works":

- The best way for parents to help their children become better readers is to read to them—even when they are very young. Children benefit most from reading aloud when they discuss stories,

Two Award-Winning Children's Authors

"A good story uses the description of events to reveal some kind of moral or psychological premise. I am not aware as I develop a story what the premise is. When I started The Polar Express, I thought I was writing about a train trip. But the story was actually about faith and the desire to believe in something. It's an intriguing process. I know if I'd set out with the goal of writing about that, I'd still be holding a pencil over a blank paper."

me to read a book and find out who you are. There are those of us who read and write to happily slip into the characters we'd like to be. It is, I believe, our way of getting to know the good and bad of us, rehearsing to be more humane."

Each year the American Library Association makes two awards. The Caldecott Medal is awarded to the artist of the most distinguished picture book published in the United States during the preceding year. The Newbery Medal is given for "the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children" published during the previous year.

learn to identify letters and words, and talk about the meaning of words.

- Children who are encouraged to draw and scribble "stories" at an early age will later learn to compose more easily, more effectively, and with greater confidence than children who do not have this encouragement.
- A good foundation in speaking and listening helps children become better readers.

"Few children learn to love books by themselves. Someone has to lure them into the wonderful world of the written word; someone has to show them the way."

—Orville Prescott, from A Father Reads to His Children

Telling young children stories can motivate them to read. Storytelling also introduces them to cultural values and literary traditions before they can read, write and talk about stories by themselves.

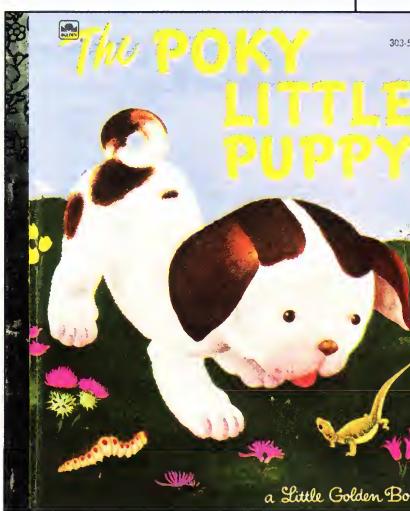

Children improve their reading ability by reading a lot. Reading achievement is directly related to the amount of reading children do in school and outside.

A Billion Little Golden Books

Little Golden Books were first published in 1942, and were instantly popular because they were inexpensive (25 cents in 1942) and were soon sold in department stores rather than in fancy bookstores. They brought early reading to many children who otherwise might not have been exposed to books until they were in school. Many stories of classic Disney movies and Disney cartoon characters have been published in Golden Books.

In November, Western Publishing Company printed the billionth Little Golden Book. The landmark event was marked by a celebration at the New York Public Library: a reading by Tony Randall of the most famous Little Golden Book, The Poky Little Puppy.

The Value of Reading Aloud to Children

"Reading aloud to your children is like hugging their minds," says Jim Trelease, author of The Read-Aloud Handbook. "Research shows that reading aloud to your children, on a daily basis, is the single most important thing you can do to build future readers."

But improving your children's reading skills isn't the only advantage gained from reading aloud. Children learn to communicate. They can write better and express themselves more clearly. And they learn to listen and understand what they hear. "Parents can give their children the gift of communication when they read aloud," continues Trelease, who stresses that even babies can benefit from hearing stories read to them. It's calming.

On the subject of buying books for children, Trelease recommends that if you're buying a book that you're going to be reading aloud, read the book to yourself. "Make sure you like it," he says. "If you read it first, you'll also know the flow of the book—the suspenseful parts where you should slow down or read softly."

Trelease has other suggestions for making a story come alive: "If it's about a blueberry, for example, you could even give your children blueberry muffins to eat while you're reading."

Jim Trelease's Do's and Don'ts About Reading Aloud To Your Children

1. Don't read as fast as you can. Take your time and read slowly so that the story has more impact.
2. Don't force your children to sit still while you are reading. They can play or draw and still listen to the story.
3. Take time to answer your children's questions about the story, since you can enhance their verbal skills while increasing their reading ability.
4. Don't use books to threaten your children. For example, don't tell a child that if he doesn't pick up his room, you won't read to him today. If books are used as a weapon, the child may develop a negative attitude toward books.
5. Continue to read aloud to your children, even when they learn to read themselves. "Most children have a listening vocabulary that is higher than their reading vocabulary," explains Trelease. "So you can read aloud more exciting books than the child can, which, in turn, stimulates the child to read more advanced books."

Trelease recommends that parents talk with their children's teachers about the value of reading aloud. Whether the subject is English or math and science, reading aloud can be an educational tool about the specific subject, while increasing the child's communication skills.

The Read-Aloud Handbook, by Jim Trelease, is published by Penguin Books. Besides offering parents advice on reading to children, the book also contains "A Treasury of Read-Alouds": descriptions of some 300 books, including picture books, novels, poetry books and anthologies for children of all ages. Following each book's description is a list of additional books that a child may enjoy.

This new regular department offers observations and information on subjects that families care about. It will frequently draw on the themes of programs currently airing on The Disney Channel. In the debut column below, for example, we focus on the pleasures and pressures of the holidays, with a look at One Magic Christmas.

And as an extension of The Disney Channel Family Reading Program, we include a list of helpful sources for choosing good children's books.

The Joy—and Stress—of the Holidays

"A lot of presents doesn't make it any better of a Christmas," Ginny Grainger grumbles to her husband, Jack, in One Magic Christmas, premiering on The Disney Channel on December 13.

"When you're a kid it does," Jack contradicts.

Jack is unemployed and he wants to spend some of their savings on presents for their children. Ginny, who works as a checkout person at a supermarket, is overwhelmed by the struggle of trying to make ends meet, and she becomes more and more bitter as Christmas approaches. She wants to buy only token presents and be done with it.

What the Graingers don't realize is that although their children have the normal desire for presents, they care more about sharing Christmas with their family than about what they get on Christmas Day. Abbie, their almost-seven-year-old daughter, has only one wish: that "my mom like Christmas better."

One Magic Christmas is a tale of unusual hardship and extraordinary magic. It's also a story of one family—Jack and Ginny Grainger, their children Cal and Abbie, and great grandpa. Through their disappointments and joys they learn the true meaning of Christmas.

The movie raises all of the questions that come up in our own lives as we celebrate Christmas or Hanukkah:

What do children really want and need at holiday time? How can parents best respond to their children's desires? How can we hold onto the magic of the season and not drown in its commercialism?

Probably the easiest way to a more enjoyable holiday season is to spend more time together with family and friends and less time rushing around trying to make things perfect. Quiet time at home making ornaments, watching a holiday television program together, or reading Christmas stories can be pleasurable for all ages. Here are a few other suggestions for easing the pressure at holiday time:

- Plan ahead. Be aware of your energy, money and stamina, and spread them out through the holidays so that you have some of each left at the end.
- Discuss the original meaning of the holiday with your children. Let the children know your values, so that their expectations are realistic. Emphasize the importance of people and of sharing good times, not just things.
- Keep things safe. Practice extra precaution when cooking, making crafts, and around candles and fireplaces.
- Take care of yourself. Understand that holidays are a stressful time because of many unusual demands, including large family gatherings.
- Think of fun, easy places to go together while school is out, such as the zoo or a puppet show at the local library.
- Give presents that are appropriate to the child's age. If gifts are inappropriate, your child gets frustrated.

Choosing the "Right" Book

Books are perfect gifts, if they're carefully selected. But people frequently feel bewildered at finding just the right book for a child. In the past few years, however, several good books have been written on the subject of picking out books for children. Here are a few:

- Choosing Books for Children: A Commonsense Guide by Betsy Hearne (Delacorte Press and Dell paperback).
- For Reading Out Loud! A Guide to Sharing Books With Children by Margaret Mary

Kimmel and Elizabeth Segel (Delacorte Press and Dell paperback).

- A Parent's Guide to Children's Reading by Nancy Larrick (Bantam Books).
- The Read-Aloud Handbook by Jim Trelease (Penguin Books).

There are also two excellent independent publications devoted solely to a review of children's books:

- The Horn Book Magazine, published six times a year (31 St. James Ave., Boston, MA 02116).

• The Korbin Letter published eight times a year (732 N. Greer Rd., Palo Alto, CA 94303).

In addition, some stores specializing in children's books publish informative newsletters.

Probably the best source, however, is your local public library. A children's librarian has invaluable information about books and children. Even more important, you can experiment with books, without making a financial investment.

MARY STEENBURGEN: Mother and Actress

Having children of my own, I understood the mother's role more clearly," Oscar-winning actress Mary Steenburgen says of her portrayal of the Scrooge-like Ginny Grainger in One Magic Christmas.

As Steenburgen explains, "Actors who haven't had kids tend to portray parents in a deferential, sweet way. Sometimes they even talk down to children. When you have kids, you realize that they are people, and you talk to them like you do anyone else."

Her enthusiasm for the film stemmed from the story. "I never discarded the script," she said after the production had been postponed for a year. She also wanted to work with director Phillip Borsos. (Borsos also directed The Grey Fox, seen recently on The Disney Channel.)

"I felt inspired by him every day," Steenburgen said. "Ultimately, he was able to do what the best directors can do. He provided me with a place to come to where I felt so safe and secure in my contribution that I could sail, I could fly. Let me explain: A kite can dance in the sky but there is this thin, almost imperceptible string at the bottom, grounding it. It's the same with a good director. He grounds you, but the string is very thin, and you can just fly up there."

JOHN CUSACK'S PURSUIT OF EXCELLENCE

Acting is something that you have to commit to and go at with passion or you'll be left at the wayside. You have to give 150 percent," observes John Cusack, who portrays the young drifter Harry Slade in The Journey of Natty Gann.

At age 20, Cusack is already a seasoned veteran, with such credits as 16 Candles, The Sure Thing, and last summer's One Crazy Summer under his belt. His commitment and passion for acting and filmmaking were demonstrated by the preparations he made for his role in Natty Gann.

"I watched The Grapes of Wrath just to get in tune with the times," he explains, "also a documentary called Brother, Can You Spare A Dime? (which aired earlier this year on The Disney Channel). I learned you had to be tough to survive riding the rails. Stowaways were always being hunted by the railroad police and there was a constant danger of losing an arm or a leg jumping on and off the trains.

"I do have a strong sense of character," Cusack says. "I wanted Harry Slade to be tough and gentle at the same time. It was a different kind of part than I'd ever done. You can't act a part that you can't relate to. I started with my own feelings, then moved to the character. Next came the outside—his walk, his attitudes, the way he carried himself."

Currently Cusack is filming the movie Hot Pursuit. He also attends New York University, where he's engaged in film studies. "I would like to write and direct films," he says. "I think that is the highest form of creativity."

CONTINUED SUPPORT OF TOYS FOR TOTS

Recently in Washington, DC, General P.X. Kelley, Commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps, was on hand to congratulate John F. Cooke, President of The Disney Channel, over The Channel's continuing involvement with the Marine Corps Reserve's Christmas charity, Toys For Tots. This is the second year in which The Disney Channel has taken part in the charity campaign.

Founded in 1947 by Marine Colonel Bill Hendricks, Toys For Tots is dedicated to spreading the joy of the holiday season by collecting and distributing new toys to needy children. The program is uniquely set up to function at the community level.

Local Marine Corps Reserve units announce a Toys For Tots campaign and then proceed to collect the donated gifts, which are sorted on the basis of suitable age and gender. Accredited social agencies then distribute the toys, bringing Christmas cheer to thousands of delighted children.

Disney's association with the Toys For Tots program goes back to its beginnings and the Toys For Tots production of their highly-prized Christmas poster. That inaugural design poster was supervised by one of Hollywood's leading screen magicians: Walt Disney.
